CurrentSAFE®

Home Electrical Services

The franchisee will operate a CurrentSAFE® franchise business using a distinctive and proprietary system for the development of additional business for building trade contractors, to offer Electrical Hazard Detection Services (“EHD”) to homeowners using state of the art testing equipment to identify potential sources for electrical fires and shock hazards. This proprietary system allows building trade contractors to offer a service that involves engaging in the repair, replacement, additions, maintenance and diagnostics of electrical distribution systems and components in stand-alone residential structures deemed to be the private residence of any individual or family, or individual condominiums, townhouses, duplexes, quads and apartments, housed in buildings of three stories or less. We refer to these services as CurrentSAFE® Services. EHD may not be offered for structures that are not residential, or perform or provide CurrentSAFE® Services outside of the residential dwelling or within an apartment or condominium complex, four stories or above.

The total investment necessary to begin operation of a CurrentSAFE® Service Franchise is from $50,399 to $171,185 depending on how you choose to pay for your initial franchise fee, lease vehicles and purchase equipment. This includes an initial franchise fee of $40,000 plus $.40 per Housing Unit over 100,000 Housing Units in your Territory that must be paid to Franchisor or affiliate.
