As a franchisee, you will operate a The Closet Trading Co.® branded store that buys and sells women's designer fashion to and with the public in a beautiful, boutique environment.

The total investment necessary to begin operation of a The Closet Trading Co. store franchise ranges from $142,400 to $360,300. This includes $62,500 to $67,500 that must be paid to the franchisor or an affiliate.

The franchisor may also, in its sole discretion, grant the right to develop multiple The Closet Trading Co. stores under an area development agreement. If you are granted the right to develop multiple stores, the total investment necessary to obtain such rights depends on how many stores you agree to develop. You must pay a development fee to the franchisor according to the following schedule: $40,000 for your first store, $25,000 for your second store, and $15,000 for each additional store. You must pay the entire development fee upon execution of the area development agreement and no additional initial franchise fee will be due for the stores developed pursuant to the area development agreement. The typical number of The Closet Trading Co. stores that we anticipate franchisees will purchase pursuant to an area development agreement is between two and five. The total investment necessary for rights to begin development of this number of The Closet Trading Co. stores ranges from $65,000 to $110,000 that must be paid to the franchisor.

What You Need To Know About Franchising Generally

Continuing responsibility to pay fees. You may have to pay royalties and other fees, even if you are losing money.

Business model can change. The franchise agreement may allow the franchisor to change its manuals and business model without your consent. These changes may require you to make additional investments in your franchise business or may harm your franchise business.

Supplier restrictions. You may have to buy or lease items from the franchisor or a limited group of suppliers the franchisor designates. These items may be more expensive than similar items you could buy on your own.

Operating restrictions. The franchise agreement may prohibit you from operating a similar business during the term of the franchise. There are usually other restrictions. Some examples may include controlling your location, your access to customers, what you sell, how you market, and your hours of operation.

Competition from franchisor. Even if the franchise agreement grants you a territory, the franchisor may have the right to compete with you in your territory.

Renewal. Your franchise agreement may not permit you to renew. Even if it does, you may have to sign a new agreement with different terms and conditions in order to continue to operate your franchise business.

When your franchise ends. The franchise agreement may prohibit you from operating a similar business after your franchise ends even if you still have obligations to your landlord or other creditors.

Some States Require Registration

Your state may have a franchise law, or other law, that requires franchisors to register before offering or selling franchises in the state. Registration does not mean that the state recommends the franchise or has verified the information in this document. To find out if your state has a registration requirement, or to contact your state, use the agency information in Exhibit A.
